From Denis Leary to Conan O'Brien, the Boston area has produced a lot of great comics over the years. However, only a handful have been able to grow as fervent a following as Canton's own Bill Burr. After taking over historic venues like Madison Square Garden with his hilarious stand-up acts, the fan-favorite comedian is posed to make his mark on television with his Netflix series "F Is for Family." We caught up with Burr to chat about the return of his hit animated series and keeping it real.

SantaCon returns with two routes that will converge in Fenway. GETTY IMAGES

Everything you need to know about SantaCon 2018

The annual gathering of St. Nicholas enthusiasts returns this weekend.

MATT JUUL

Festive revelers dressed as jolly old Saint Nicholas will take to the streets this weekend for SantaCon 2018. The annual gathering has become quite the holiday tradition in Boston and several cities across the globe, drawing thousands of attendees each year. Here's what you need to know about SantaCon 2018.

What is SantaCon?

As the name suggests, SantaCon is an annual convention for Santa lovers where participants dress up like their favorite Christmas character. In addition to parading around the city in festive costumes, the free event doubles as a bar crawl as participants merrily hop from one pub to the next.

There are a few rules in place to avoid any bad Santa scenarios. According to the event's Facebook page, things that will get you placed on the naughty list include throwing coal, making kids cry and getting too drunk to function, so remember to not drink and drive your sleigh. And if a bar hits capacity and stops accepting Santas, just hit the next spot on the schedule. Guests are also required to address everyone as Santa and are encouraged to dress up, say "ho ho ho" and even bring gifts to give away.

What are the routes?

SantaCon 2018 features two routes this year, one starting in Cambridge and another in Boston proper. The Cambridge route kicks off from Davis Square at noon, stopping at The Burren, Underbones and Sligo Pub in Somerville before heading to Charlie's Kitchen Beer Garden, Hong Kong and Grafton Street Pub in Harvard Square beginning at 2 p.m. From 4 p.m.-6 p.m., the final leg of the Cambridge route will take over People's Republik, The Cantab, Tavern, The Field, The Middle East, The Asgard and Miracle of Science.

The Boston route for SantaCon 2018 starts at noon from Government Center with stops at The Kinsdale Irish Pub, The Hub Pub, Beantown Pub, Silvertones and SideBar. The fun continues around the Pudential area starting at 2 p.m. with stops at The Globe, Back Bay Social Club, Whiskey's, Lir, The Pour House, McGreevy's, Dillions and The BeBop.

Both routes will converge in the Fenway neighborhood starting at 4 p.m. with visits to Pizzeria Uno's, Cask & Flagon, Beerworks, Game ON!, Bleacher Bar, House of Blues, Bill's Bar & Lounge, Lansdowne Pub, Cheeky Monkey Brewing and Loretta's Last Call.

When is it?

SantaCon 2018 takes place between noon and 9 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 1. For more information, check out santacon.info.

How Bill Burr keeps 'F is for Family' real

The creators of Netflix's popular animated comedy talk season 3. ANDREW HUSBAND

Early on in "F is for Family" season 3, Frank Murphy (Bill Burr) takes his wife and kids to a drive-in theater with new neighbor Chet Stevenson (Vince Vaughn) and his spouse. The scene is an important one for the new neighbors' budding friendship, but it's also rife with much of the crude, biting humor that Burr's Netflix series is known for. Frank is constantly yelling at his kids, a creepy resident is spying on other people's cars in the background, and at any moment, it feels like everything could just go completely off the rails.

Except it won't, because unlike other adult-oriented animated series like "Rick & Morty" and "Adventure Time," "F is for Family" goes out of its way to stay as real as possible – despite the fact that it's a cartoon. According to executive producers Michael Price and Peter Billingsly, Burr is the man responsible for this.

"Bill is a huge part of that," says Price. "I worked on 'The Simpsons' for many years. The staff there was really funny, so the first instinct was often to try and think of the funniest things to say or do. Sometimes we'd go a little crazy with it, but not with 'F is for Family.' In the writer's room, Bill always acknowledges that something is really funny if it is, but he always wants to make sure it's real. He wants to make sure we stay grounded with who the characters are."

"I'm the guy that tries to keep it tethered to reality, basically," says Burr. "I do this, I would say, because so that it doesn't get too absurd."

Of course, there's nothing inherently wrong with absurdity in comedy. The genre is rife with it, especially when it comes to family-centric sitcoms. And if it's a cartoon like "The Simpsons" or "Family Guy," then absurdity can easily be built into the show format itself. Nonetheless, Burr errs on the side of avoiding it with "F is for Family."

"If you make them laugh their asses off and it's real, then people will connect with it more."

Bill Burr

GETTY IMAGES

"Once stuff gets too absurd, at least when I watch things, then I don't care about the characters," he explains. "It's just a comedy preference. The comedy I find really funny is whenever it goes down the way it really goes down. I mean, there's plenty absurdity in the show, but it's just more of the tertiary characters. It's not the main characters."

So whenever the comic beats involve the stalker-y aspirations of the car-peeping neighbor, Mr. Goomer (Trevor Devall), then the more absurdity the better. But if Frank, his wife Sue (Laura Dern), and his kids Kevin (Justin Long), Bill (Haley Reinhart) and Maureen (Debi Derryberry) are involved, then not so much.

"I think you connect with people more, the more real it is," says Burr. "If you make them laugh their asses off and it's real, then people will connect with it more. But if you make them laugh their asses off and it's over the top and absurd, they just go 'that was fun' and move on. It's when you get them to relate to stuff that I think you can better connect to the audience. That comes from the comics that I watched when I was growing up."

Yet that doesn't mean things will get silly, as they did toward the end of season 2 with the foiled terrorist plot at the airport Frank works at. Between the exploding people and the laugh-out-loud weirdness of season 2's conclusion, viewers can rest assured that season 3 will keep up the pace.

"The great thing about our partnership with Netflix is that, if anything, they're pushing us to go as far as we want," says Billingsly. "So whether it's the darker humor or some of the profane language we use, they're very supportive of it. They're often pushing us to do more, so that's been nice. They're not constantly putting the shackles on us and saying, 'Jeez guys, you're going awfully far here.'"

"F is for Family" season 3 streams Friday on Netflix.

Bill Burr tries to keep it real with "F is for Family."

Martin Short on the challenge of doing voice-work and his BFF Steve Martin

The beloved actor plays three roles in "Elliot: The Littlest Reindeer."

BY GREGORY WAKEMAN

Just hearing the name Martin Short is enough to make most people break out into a smile.

The Canadian-born actor and writer has made an indelible impression on anyone who has witnessed his energetic ball of wit and humor. Whether it was when he was on television with "SCTV" and "Saturday Night Live," in films like "Three Amigos," "Father Of The Bride" and "Mars Attacks!" or in theater with his collaborations with Steven Martin and his Tony Award-winning work in "Little Me."

The 68-year-old still is and always will be looking for the next laugh. And he won't be overthinking it while he does, too.

"I look at people like Bill Hader, Fred Armisen, John Mulaney, Kristen Wiig and Kate McKinnon, they're people that have such brilliant minds and are original people," Short explains to Metro. "The thing is, if you're in this weird comedy club it is much less analytical than many people think. You don't think, 'I'm 68, what do I think is funny now?' You're still in the moment. Each new thing is just as important as the things were at 20."

Short's pursuit of a laugh led him to join the Christmas animated movie "Elliot: The Littlest Reindeer." But one part wouldn't suffice for Short, as he embraced the challenge of voicing three characters in the family comedy.

"It is fun. It is kind of challenging if you like to do voice work," says Short. "You can't hide behind a mustache or a wig. You have to make it so distinct so people don't know it is you doing three. So it is all about achieving that. It is more challenging. So more fun."

The comedy legend lends his voice to the holiday flick. GETTY IMAGES

The film, which revolves around the titular horse trying-out to replace Blitzen as Santa's reindeer when he suddenly retires, was even more alluring for Short because of the vocal ensemble already included Samantha Bee and John Cleese.

"That's an attraction. You like that company," admits Short. "If the only other name is Kid Rock you go, 'Uh huh?' You're not jumping through hoops. Kid Rock is a great talent. I have great love for Kid Rock. I am just saying, if it is John Cleese you jump a little quicker."

Short says that his current working schedule, which consists of vocal work and weekly stage shows with his best friend Steve Martin, is the perfect size for him.

"Doing movies will just be more work. Getting up at 6 in the morning. I think the fractured approach is better than doing the intense thing at this stage of my life," says Short. "You're just looking for good vehicles and good platforms. You always did. In the old days, in Vaudeville, you looked for the best theaters. So Netflix is a pretty big theatre nowadays. So people want to play that."

"For me to do an odd appearance in a TV show, or doing a series or something on stage, or tour with Steve Martin, the eclectic nature I find to be more interesting," he adds.

Martin and Short will have performed "Now You See Them, Soon You Won't" 80 times across the United States by the end of 2018, and it's clear that the duo is relishing being up on stage together again.

"That's like going fishing," says Short. "You go out on the road with a band and your best friend and you play Pittsburgh and maybe Boston over three days and you have a riot on stage. The audiences are fantastic."

"Then you do it three weeks later again. It is never overwhelming," he adds. "Instead, it is just so much fun."

"Elliot: The Littlest Reindeer" hits theaters Nov. 30.

Free things to do in Boston this month

Have some fun to close out the year, without breaking the bank. MATT JUUL

If you want to have a bit of fun to close out the year, but all that holiday shopping is putting a strain on your wallet, don't worry. There are plenty of awesome events happening around town in December that won't cost you a penny. Here's our guide to the best free things to do in Boston this month.

Old South Ringers Christmas Concert
Celebrate the holiday season with the Old South Church to kick off the month of December. Conductor Peter Coulombe will once again lead the church's handbell choir for its free annual Christmas concert, which returns this weekend. Dec. 2, 7:30 p.m., Old South Church, 645 Boylston St., oldsouth.org

ICA Free Thursday Nights
Enjoy the beauty of the Institute of Contemporary Art without paying the price of admission every Thursday evening. Fans will have four chances to enjoy the free series in December, so make sure to add a trip to the museum to your calendar. Dec. 6, 13, 20 & 27, 5-9 p.m., Institute of Contemporary Art, 25 Harbor Shore Dr., icaboston.org

Santa Speedo Run 2018
Watch hundreds of scantily clad runners race through the streets of Boston when the annual Santa Speedo Run returns in December. While the event is free to watch from the sidelines, if you're brave enough to face the cold in a speedo, you can register as participant for a $30 fee or start a fundraising team, with proceeds going to benefit the Play Ball! Foundation. Dec. 8, 1 p.m., Lir Tavern, 903 Boylston St., ssrunners.org

Kendall Square Holiday Ice Show
Back for its 13th year, the annual Holiday Ice Show will once again take over the Community Ice Skating at Kendall Square in Cambridge. World-class pros and international skaters will take to the ice to show off their moves. Visitors can also enjoy free admission all day long, while skate rentals will be available at their regular rates. Dec. 15, 2 p.m., Community Ice Skating, Kendall Square, 300 Athenaeum St., Cambridge, paddleboston.com

First Night 2019
End the year in style when Boston's annual First Night festivities return on New Year's Eve. In addition to the midnight fireworks show, the event will also feature live entertainment, ice sculpting, family-friendly activities and more. Dec. 31, noon-12:30 a.m., various locations, firstnightboston.org

End the year with a bang!

STOLEN

Rembrandt van Rijn
Self Portrait
"Portrait of the Artist as a young man"
C. 1634
Etching Size 2 x 1.8 inches

Stolen from the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, Boston MA March 18, 1990

Taken with other Rembrandts, a Vermer and other works of art in the largest property theft in history. This was one of the first Rembrandts bought by Mrs. Gardner and is thought to have been the inspiration for her to create a Museum accessible to the public.

All that remains where the portrait once hung is a small empty gilded frame.

Hundreds of hours and thousands of dollars were spent in creating an exact rendition of Rembrandt's remarkable etching. This included a forensic study of several examples existing from museums around the country. Both ink and paper qualities were included in this study.
Nothing has been added!

Printed on Hahnemhi handmade paper, matted with an extra thick mat, and printed with the finest French ink (all archival) on 150-year-old Bureau of Printing and Engraving Intagilo Press.

Own or Gift this Fine Art intaglio Etching and enjoy what has been relegated to memory.

Same image size as the original, matted 5 x 7 inches ready for framing. Signed and numbered, only 100 etchings will be printed.

HOLIDAY GIFT GUIDE

6 Most anticipated video games of the end of the year

Although there's only about month left until the year ends, our consoles and laptops will not be running out of fun. After the Thanksgiving frenzy, the final stretch of 2018 comes with lots of titles that want to become part of your collection. GABRIEL HUERTA | MWN

"Just Cause 4"

For those who love generating chaos, touring large open worlds and performing wildly exaggerated action scenes, "Just Cause 4" is a perfect end of the year title. Once again, you can control the main character, Rico Rodríguez, who on this occasion will visit the Latin American country of Solis where he will have to face the most powerful private army in the world, Black Hand, which is causing problems. With improved game mechanics and a dynamic weather system that will allow you to experience flying through a hurricane, "Just Cause 4" is the game that adrenaline lovers will truly appreciate.
Release date: Dec. 4

ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

"Fallout 76"

Bethesda will make an amazing leap when it releases "Fallout 76" for Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC. One of the most striking changes that this title will have will be to turn an experience that during the year had been for a single player into a massive online world, that will take us to the East of the United States in a post-apocalyptic adventure in the Appalachian Mountains. With different factions to choose from and a world full of possibilities, fans of this games series can enjoy multiplayer experience.
Release date: Now available

"Pokémon Let's Go Pikachu & Eevee"

Nintendo and The Pokémon Company released this adventure for Nintendo Switch. "Pokémon Let's Go Pikachu and Eevee' is a remake of the first Pokémon adventure but with truly impressive visual improvements. In addition, the title allows you to connect with what you have achieved on your cellphone with Pokémon Go, as well as transfer the creatures caught within the mobile title.
Release date: Now available

"Battlefield V"

World War II is back again with Battlefield V, under DICE and Electronic Arts. With graphic improvements, a new story mode and the promise of a Battle Royale mode within the next few months, one of the most important franchises of first-person shooters invites us to prepare for one of the most devastating conflicts in the history of humanity.
Release date: Now available

"Darksiders III"

After six years in limbo following the closure and bankruptcy of THQ, the Darksiders series returns with a third instalment. Here the players will control Fury, sister of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse who is on a quest to persecute and destroy the seven deadly sins. The game shows great improvements over its predecessors, with a highly-polished combat system and impressive apocalyptic worlds.
Release date: Now available

"Super Smash Bros. Ultimate"

The biggest battle in the Nintendo universe will finally hit Switch with "Super Smash Bros. Ultimate." With all the characters and scenarios that have appeared in different versions of this game since 1998, this definitive version will also feature other guest characters such as Simon Belmont from Castlevania and Metroid's Ridley. Thanks to Switch's portability, you can take the fight with you everywhere.
Release date: Dec. 7

Jessie James Decker teams with eBay for charity to get into the giving spirit

The singer and mother of three reveals her Toy Wish List and amazing giveaway to benefit the Save the Children Foundation.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Now that we are headed into the holiday season, eBay is partnering up with pop singer and mother of three Jessie James Decker to get shoppers into the giving spirit as they shop for presents for their loved ones.

To get into the giving spirit, Decker has curated her very own eBay Toy Wish List with all proceeds from the sales on these items going toward the Save the Children Foundation. Starting today, and running through the end of the month, eBay shoppers can also bid in increments of $5, $15, $25 or $50 for the chance to win all of the items included on Decker's list.

We spoke with Decker to find out why giving is so important during this time of year, and what kind of input her children had in coming up with her toy list.

Tell us about this new partnership with eBay and Save the Children. Why is it so important to donate to charity this holiday season?

The thing that I love about it is they are able to connect with so many different charities. It's not just one in particular. So I feel like it gives you the option of what you are most passionate about and they're able to connect that for you or for individuals. I love it. But, obviously, I'm a mother of three and Save the Children just resonated with me more than anything.

GETTY IMAGES

How collaborative was the toy selection process for the list between you and your children?

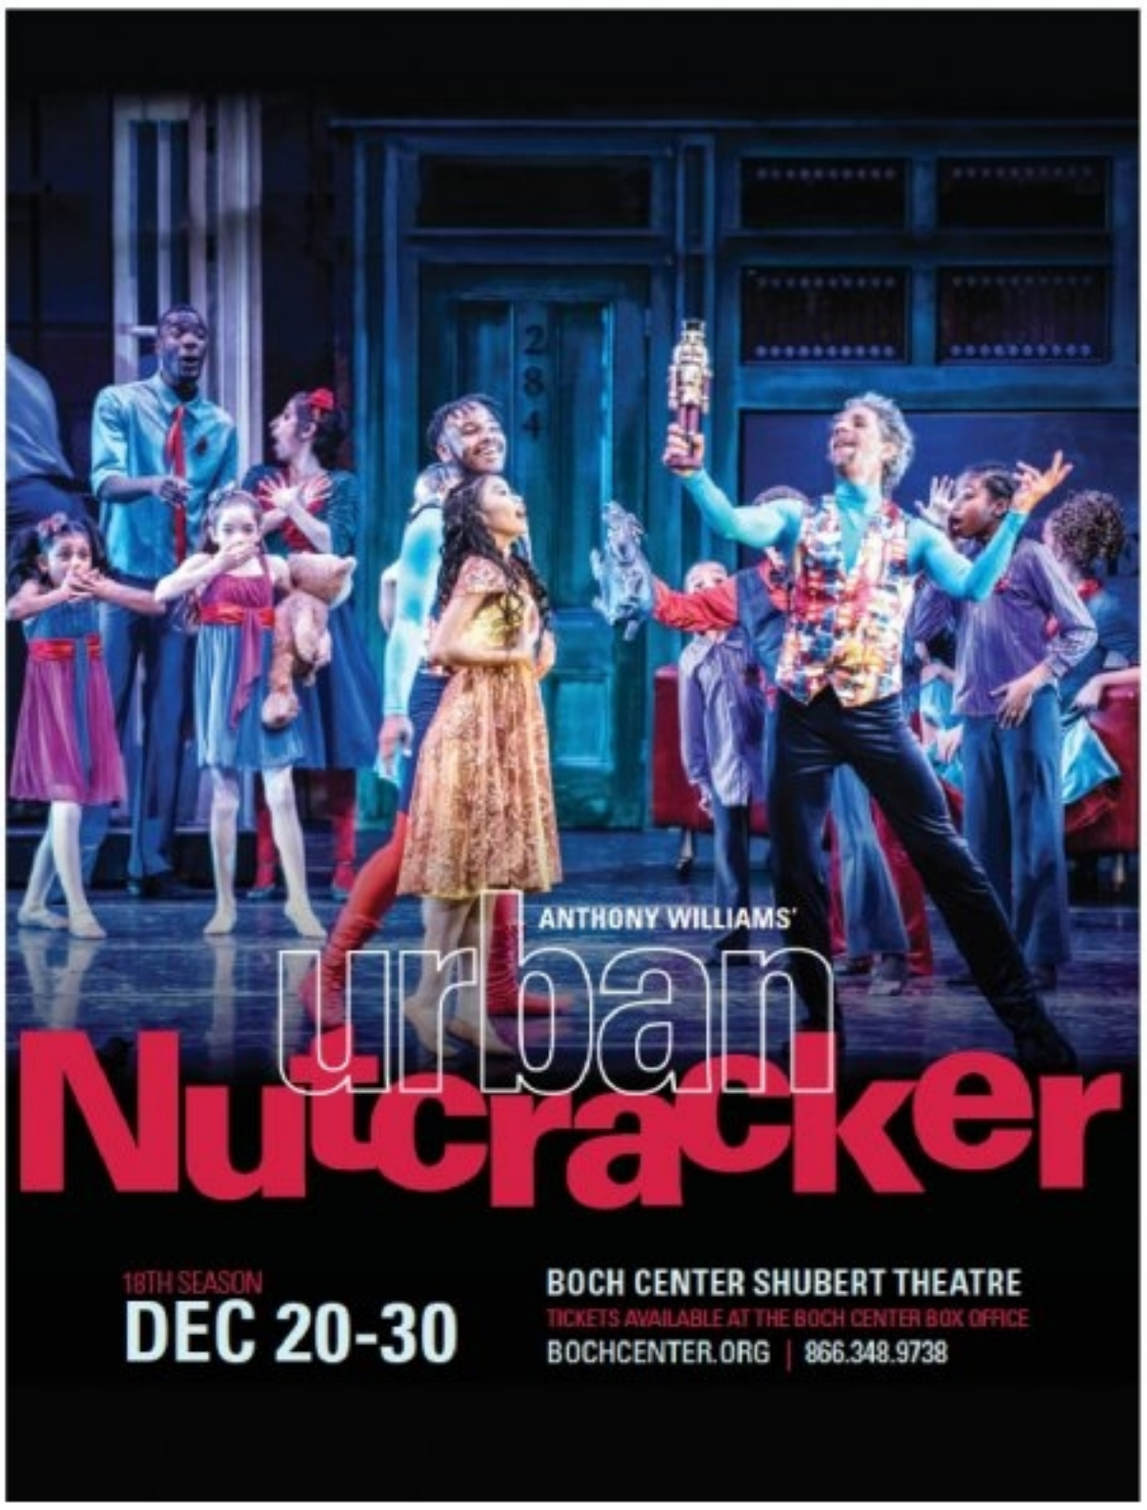
I hear about toys because of my daughter. She's the one who informs me about what is cool and what's trendy. What's really funny is when I was kind of looking through the list with eBay, the toys that I was going to suggest to them were already on the list. My daughter, who is four-and-a-half, was already on the same page with eBay! I was like, "How do you know what's cool and what's trendy?" I don't even remember being four and remembering what was a cool and trendy toy, but she does. She was talking about Hatchimals and L.O.L. dolls. I was like, "What are these things?" They were on the eBay list so I was like, "Well, I guess Vivi knows and so does eBay!"

Are there any toys your kids are excited about this holiday season?

I think probably the Hatchimals. She has been talking a lot about that. I still don't quite understand what they are, but I'm sure she'll explain them to me when she gets them for Christmas. My son, who is three, is obsessed with anything and everything Paw Patrol. He's been wearing this fireman's outfit so I put a Paw Patrol fire truck on the list for him. He'll be super-excited because he doesn't have that yet and it will match his little outfit.

Do you have any plans for new music in the new year?

I do! I am putting out an EP at the top of the year and I am going on tour starting in April. So, I'm really excited about that. Actually, through eBay, we're doing a little giveaway where two people can bid and come to my show and hang out with me backstage before I go on. Yeah, I'm really excited about music. I had a baby this year so it's been kind of hard to get on the road, so next year I'm pretty much dedicating the whole year to music and getting back out there. I'm really excited to come back.



HERE ARE THE ITEMS ON JESSIE JAMES DECKER'S EBAY TOY WISH LIST:

Former Insys executive pleads guilty to opioid bribe scheme

Alec Burlakoff faces up to 20 years in prison.

A former executive at Insys Therapeutics Inc. pleaded guilty on Wednesday to participating in a scheme to bribe doctors to prescribe the company's powerful opioid medication and entered into a deal to cooperate with prosecutors.

Alec Burlakoff, who was the Arizona-based drugmaker's vice president of sales, pleaded guilty in federal court in Boston to racketeering conspiracy, becoming the highest-level executive to admit wrongdoing in the investigation of Insys.

By agreeing to cooperate, Burlakoff could become a key witness at the January trial of six former Insys executives and managers charged with engaging in the scheme, including the company's billionaire founder, John Kapoor.

Burlakoff, 44, faces up to 20 years in prison. But by agreeing to cooperate, the Florida resident could receive a more lenient sentence.

Kapoor and his co-defendants have pleaded not guilty. Kapoor's lawyer did not respond to requests for comment.

The case, brought in the midst of a national opioid addiction epidemic, centers on Subsys, Insys' under-the-tongue spray for managing pain in cancer patients. It contains fentanyl, an opioid 100 times stronger than morphine.

Prosecutors allege that from 2012 to 2015, Kapoor, former Chief Executive Michael Babich, Burlakoff and others conspired to bribe doctors to prescribe Subsys in order to boost sales and to defraud insurers into paying for it.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Fred Wyshak in court said Burlakoff, at the direction of Kapoor and Babich, used a speaker program ostensibly meant to educate medical professionals about Subsys as a vehicle to bribe doctors retained to act as speakers.

Wyshak said Insys' speaker events were poorly attended "shams" and that the program's real purpose was to provide a method of paying speaker fees to doctors to write prescriptions for Subsys, resulting in the opioid being over-prescribed.

"They rewarded prolific writers with more speaking opportunities and punished those who were not writing sufficient prescriptions by removing them from the speaking program," he said.

Wyshak said Burlakoff, who supervised Insys' sales staff, worked with others to bribe doctors in other ways, such as by employing their girlfriends or relatives.

Other defendants include Michael Gurry, Insys' former vice president of managed markets; Richard Simon, a former national director of sales; and Sunrise Lee and Joseph Rowan, both of whom were regional sales directors.

Insys in August announced it had agreed to pay at least $150 million as part of a settlement with the U.S. Justice Department that would resolve related claims. REUTERS

Trump says Manafort pardon 'not off the table'

REUTERS IMAGES

President Donald Trump said on Wednesday he has not ruled out granting a pardon to his former campaign chairman, Paul Manafort, who has pleaded guilty to a range of federal charges from money laundering to unregistered lobbying.

"It was never discussed, but I wouldn't take it off the table. Why would I take it off the table?" the president told the New York Post during an Oval Office interview.

Prosecutors for the special counsel investigating Russian meddling in the 2016 U.S. presidential election said in a court filing on Monday that Manafort had lied to them, breaching a plea agreement.

"Manafort committed federal crimes by lying to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Special Counsel's Office on a variety of subject matters," Special Counsel Robert Mueller said in the filing. The filing did not give details but promised more as part of a presentencing report.

Manafort said in the same filing that he disagreed with the special counsel's assertion that he had lied, but both sides agreed the court should move ahead and sentence him for his crimes.

Without a pardon, the 69-year-old Manafort could spend the rest of his life in prison, experts said.

The breakdown in the plea deal means that Manafort will almost certainly be hit with a harsher sentence — both for the crimes he pleaded guilty to in Washington and for his conviction in August in a separate case in Virginia on bank and tax fraud.

Manafort was likely facing about 10 years in prison for the eight guilty counts in the Virginia case alone, sentencing experts have said.

But the development also raised speculation that Manafort may be seeking to curry favor with Trump or protecting other associates who worked on the campaign.

Trump has been vocal in his support for Manafort, lauding him as a "very good person" during the Virginia trial.

The president criticized the Mueller probe in his interview with the Post, charging that Manafort, his former political adviser Roger Stone, and Stone's associate Jerome Corsi were all asked to lie by the special counsel's office. Trump said the three were "actually very brave." REUTERS

Boston tree lighting brings holiday cheer to Faneuil Hall

Plus, everything to know about the next tree lighting, on Boston Common.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Faneuil Hall tree lighting. DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

The holiday season is here, and that means multiple Boston tree-lighting events.

The Faneuil Hall tree lighting 2018 took place on Tuesday and featured a visit from Santa, of course, along with the Mayor's Community Gospel Choir and Brynn Cartelli, a Massachusetts native and winner of the 14th season of "The Voice."

Tuesday's event drew a huge crowd as many missed out on a bit of holiday cheer when an earlier Boston tree-lighting event was canceled.

The Copley Square Tree Lighting was scheduled for Monday, but the Boston Parks and Recreation Department was forced to cancel that event due to inclement weather.

If you missed out on the Faneuil Hall tree lighting as well, don't worry, there are more Boston tree-lighting events to get you into the holiday spirit.

The next Boston tree lighting takes place on Boston Common on Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m.

The Boston Common Tree Lighting will feature Karen Casey, deputy premier of Nova Scotia, as that Christmas tree is the one which came all the way from the Canadian province. Casey will join Boston Mayor Marty Walsh onstage with members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Santa Claus.

WCVB's Anthony Everett and Shayna Seymour will host the Boston tree lighting broadcast, which you can watch live on Channel 5 beginning at 7 p.m.

The broadcast will include way more than just the actual lighting of the Christmas tree. The event includes multiplatinum pop star Andy Grammer, music from Nova Scotia's Hillsburn and Makayla Lynn, local recording artist Phaedra, Willy Wonka from "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory," the cast of North Shore Music Theater's "A Christmas Carol" and the Morning Star Baptist Church Gospel Choir. The show will close with a pyrotechnic display by Atlas PyroVision.

Pot shop sales exceed $2.2M in first five days

DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN / METRO

In the first five days that retail marijuana stores were open in Massachusetts, consumers bought more than $2.2 million worth of marijuana and marijuana products.

The Cannabis Control Commission announced Tuesday afternoon that the two stores that opened last Tuesday — Cultivate in Leicester and New England Treatment Access in Northampton — reported a combined $2,217,621.13 in gross sales through Sunday.

Marijuana users have purchased more than 56,000 products and the average amount spent per unit is $39.33, the CCC said.

The CCC considers each individual item a unit; an eighth of an ounce of cannabis flower and a five-pack of pre-rolled joints are each considered one unit. Customers have bought an average of 3.4 items per transaction.

Cannabis purchases are subject to a 17 percent state tax rate and a 3 percent local tax. Based on sales figures released Tuesday by the CCC, the state stands to collect about $376,995 in tax revenue from the first five days of legal marijuana sales. Leicester and Northampton will divide roughly $66,528 in local tax revenue between themselves, in proportion with each location's gross sales.

The CCC released the sales data Tuesday afternoon but said it would not issue a statement on the data.

A look inside UMass Boston's Winter 2019 courses

Registration for UMass Boston's 2019 winter courses has officially opened for all students who are looking to continue their studies after finals are over. While the prospect of giving up your winter break after finals only to study more may not seem like the most appealing idea at first, UMass Boston has a number of special courses that may change your mind. Here are some of the undergraduate and graduate courses that will be provided during the Winter 2019 session.

Undergraduate programs

Some of the undergraduate programs at UMass Boston that will be offering courses during the winter break of 2019 will be Africana Studies, Asian Studies, Communication, Environmental Studies, History, Nursing, Theatre Arts, Anthropology, Biology, Dance, Global Affairs, Latin American Studies, Philosophy, Women's and Gender Studies, Art, Classics, Economics, Greek, Music, and Sociology.

Each of these courses will provide similar amounts of credits to courses that are offered throughout the year and will either meet on campus, online, or even at the popular UMass Boston Harbor.

Graduate programs

UMass Boston will be offering two graduate courses during the winter. The first course will be a part of their Applied Behavioral Analysis graduate program and is titled "Autism Spectrum Disorder: Characteristics and Interventions." This three-credit online course will be taught by Professor Chris Denning and will cover the various teaching methods for students with autism spectrum disorders from a behavior analytic perspective. The course will start on Jan. 7 and run until Jan. 27.

The second graduate course offered by UMass Boston is a part of the MBA program and titled "Global Industry and Competitive Analysis." While many of UMass' winter classes allow you to participate online or on campus, this month-long course will require students to travel to Delhi, India, and will consist of lectures by both faculty and industry specialists on the Indian economy, Indian accounting standards and the Indian legal framework.

The course will be taught by Dr. Surjit Tinaikar (Ph.D., CFA), who is an associate professor in the Accounting and Finance Department at UMass Boston. Students enrolled in the UMass Boston College of Management are eligible for this thrilling opportunity, and undergraduate students and those who are not affiliated with UMass Boston will be able to take the course with permission from Professor Tinaikar.

Like we said before, registration is currently open for these winter courses, so make sure to enroll as soon as you can. The registration period for all undergraduate and graduate classes ends at 8:30 a.m. on the day of the first session.

3 Reasons why you should take winter classes

While many students are cramming for their midterms and getting ready for a nice six-week-long winter break in between their fall and spring semesters, many students choose to keep the train rolling and enroll in winter classes. So what is the benefit of continuing on through the break, you might ask? Well, as it turns out, winter classes can provide students a much-needed leg up in their academic careers. Wait, wait, wait. Let us prove our point…

1. Because graduating early can be a great thing

The average four-year school requires each student to earn 120 credits in order to fulfill their diploma requirements. By getting a jump on knocking down some of these credits with winter classes, you can free up the back half of the year and maybe even get on pace to graduate early. Schools like UMass Amherst offer courses like Introduction to Microeconomics and Anatomy & Physiology I-II as well as a robust selection of online courses that you can take while your classmates are on break.

2. Why not retake a course?

Maybe you didn't do so hot on that required math course during your fall semester? Well, perhaps hanging back during the winter to retake the course and improve your tarnished GPA will be a good idea. While it may be a bummer to not have the break to regroup at home, being accountable for losing focus on your studies will give you that extra boost toward graduating cum laude or better. Besides, overcoming your mistakes will give you the ample brain fuel to take on your spring semester courses with ease.

3. What is this "J-term" that everyone keeps talking about?

Well, here's the answer: A "J-term," short for "January term," is a short, month-long semester that helps to alleviate the courseload throughout the year. Many schools that offer J-terms provide options for students to use this time to study off campus in exotic locations, or to simply knock out some of their required classes during the first month of the year. J-terms are perfect for students who may feel like they will be in flux during their winter break and would like to have a more stable schedule on through the end of the school year.

Come celebrate 30 years of culinary excellence with Boston University

Chef Jacques Pépin. PROVIDED

The school's Culinary Arts Program will honor co-founder Chef Jacques Pépin next month. PAT KING

The city of Boston has a long line of great chefs who have put it on the map as one of the greatest food towns our country has to offer. The reasoning behind this reputation can be attributed to the groundwork laid by chef and culinary instructor Jacques Pépin and his work as one of the three original founders of Boston University's Culinary Arts Program. On Dec. 5, many of the city's top chefs will gather at the Hotel Commonwealth as Boston University's Programs in Food & Wine and the Jacques Pépin Legacy Fund (JPLF) commemorate the 30th anniversary of Boston University's Certificate Program in Culinary Arts.

Ming Tsai. GETTY IMAGES

"We are thrilled to collaborate with BU's Programs in Food & Wine to celebrate its 30th anniversary," said Rollie Wesen, executive director of the Jacques Pépin Foundation in a press release about the event. "Few, if any, have done more to promote culinary education and dedication to craft than Chef Jacques Pépin," she added, "and nowhere is this more evident than in his participation in the development and continuing teaching in the Culinary Arts Certificate Program. Countless students have benefited from his teaching, and the JPFL will ensure that his presence and legacy continue far into the future."

This event will act as a culmination of 30 years of excellence in Boston University's Culinary Arts Certificate Program. Originally founded in 1989 by Pépin alongside the legendary chef Julia Child and Director Rebecca Alssid, BU's program has churned out some of the city's most notable culinary trailblazers through their extensive 14-week program taught by chefs and food industry professionals.

The celebration will provide guests with a four-course meal provided by all-star chefs Jeremy Sewall (Island Creek Oyster Bar, Row 34), Justin Walker (Walkers Maine), Renee Erickson (Bateau and The Walrus and the Carpenter in Seattle) and Stephanie Izard (Girl & the Goat, Little Goat in Chicago) paired with some of the finest wines from around the globe. Chef Pépin will provide a quick culinary demonstration after dinner along with a live auction. Guests will also be treated to a dessert reception shortly after with an amazing lineup of bakers and chefs including Janine Sciarappa and Jim Dodge (BU Culinary), Lauren Moran (Honeycomb), and Maura Kilpatrick (Oleana/Sofra). Special guests will include Jody Adams, Dana Cowin, Mary Ann Esposito, Ana Sortun, Ming Tsai, Jasper White, and more. Tickets for the event will cost $500 per person and $750 for VIP.

"One of my favorite places to teach is at BU's Culinary Arts program," explained Chef Pépin in the event's release. "For the last 30 years, it has been my second home. The quality of the program, as well as the enthusiasm of the students, is unsurpassed."

How to save money on traveling home for holiday breaks

Consider this your last-minute guide for cheap travel once you've finished your finals.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

As a freshman in college, it seems like you just started this big adventure yesterday. But now with the holidays just around the corner, finding the best ways to get home to see your family should be entering your mind so you don't have to pay a semester's worth of room and board on last-minute plane tickets. Here are some of the best cheap travel options that you can count on for traveling home for the holidays. After all, final exams are enough to worry about as it is.

Hitch a ride

Going away to college is a great way to meet like-minded students from all across the country. But one of the things that you can count on, is that you are also bound to meet people who grew up close to where you grew up and who will be heading in that direction when school closes down for breaks. One surefire way for cheap travel is to coordinate with those students to see if anyone is making the drive and if they have an open seat in their car. Make sure to find any message boards or groups on Facebook and places like Reddit to see if you can get a lift.

Cost saving travel apps for college kids

Oh, technology. While we all like to moan about the time sucking and addictive evils it has introduced to our own fragile human psyche, having the ability to find the best options for cheap travel as we get closer to the holidays is one thing that we can really rejoice over. By downloading travel saving apps like Check My Bus for cheap bus trips and Skyscanner for inexpensive flights, you can cut down on the time you would take to cross-analyze your different options for getting home.

Get a Student Advantage Card to save on travel

One of the perks of being a poor college student is knowing that many companies understand that this is a tough time of adjustment for many young students. This can work out in your favor as companies like Amtrack, Greyhound, Exedia.com and many others will offer discounted rates on tickets using a Student Advantage Card.

To sign up for this card, you will have to fill out your personal information through their site at studentadvantage.com and submit either a payment of $22.50 for one full year, $32.50 for two years, $42.50 for three years, or $52.50 for four full years of benefits. While it may seem like quite a bit of money at first, you should think about how much happier you will be after all of the money you have saved.

Pats back home to face Vikings

Patriots look to remain unbeaten at Gillette.

JULIAN EDLOW
sports@metro.us

The Patriots came out of the bye week and took care of business on the road against the Jets, 27-13. While the victory was by no means dominant, New England looked as healthy as it has in weeks.

Week 13 provides a much tougher test against a 6-4-1 Minnesota team that's firmly in the NFC playoff picture. But the Vikings will travel to Gillette Stadium for this matchup, where the Pats sit at 5-0 this season.

Here are three things to watch for when these teams meet on Sunday (4:25 p.m., FOX).

Julian Edelman looks for a clearing last week against the Jets. GETTY IMAGES

Home cookin'

Gronk returned to the field against the Jets following a two-game absence, but with the bye week mixed in there it was his first game in close to a month. It didn't take long to tell that the rest did him well as he hauled in a 34-yard touchdown from Brady in the first half.

Sure, Gronk finished with just three catches for 54 yards and the score, but his presence alone changed the entire offense. Brady had previously been locked in on Julian Edelman and Josh Gordon, overtargeting them 44 total times in the two previous games.

Gronk led the team with seven targets in this one, while Gordon and Edelman saw five apiece — Gordon caught all five for 70 yards, his most efficient game as a Patriot. Edelman managed his usual stat line as well, going for 84 yards and a touchdown. Chris Hogan and Phillip Dorsett, who'd practically been phased out of the offense in recent weeks, each caught both of their targets for 57 yards combined.

While the narrative that Gronkowski is having a down season has legs to it, he's been better than you'd think in four home games — averaging five catches for 85 yards. Brady's also been far superior when playing in Foxborough this season, throwing for 305 yards per game (versus 250 on the road) and tossing an average of 2.2 touchdowns (versus 1.3 on the road). This spot screams for a classic Brady-Gronk breakout game that we've been waiting for.

The RB trio

Rex Burkhead hasn't played since going on injured reserve after Week 3, but don't forget this is a player the Patriots trusted with 19 touches out of the backfield in Week 1. Sony Michel didn't play in that game, and after another impressive 21-133-1 line as a runner against the Jets, will remain the featured rusher.

But the days of Cordarrelle Patterson lining up at running back (outside of an occasional gadget play) are likely coming to an end, as Burkhead has been activated to the 53-man roster. The Patriots have been operating with just one or two true running backs for weeks now, which has led to a little bit too much work for James White and Michel, who New England knows it needs come playoff time.

With 137 touches on the season for the fragile White, and 133 for a player going through the grind of the NFL for the first time in Michel, Burkhead can provide some much-needed veteran relief. Burkhead's dual ability to both run and catch the ball makes him the perfect option to spell both backs, which we should start to see take place against Minnesota.

Thanks, AFC

If the Patriots make yet another run to the Super Bowl, the AFC is going to look back on Weeks 11 and 12 with disgust.

The Chiefs and Steelers were in full control of the two postseason byes, with 9-1 and 7-2-1 records respectively. Beating the Rams is a tough task, but the Chiefs fell to 9-2 when they failed to do so, while Pittsburgh stuttered in Denver to drop to 7-3-1. That leaves the Patriots as the two-seed in the AFC.

A big showdown in Pittsburgh on Dec. 16 could determine who finishes higher in the standings between the Steelers and Patriots, while the Chiefs sit just one game up on the Pats — which is important because another loss would put New England ahead of Kansas City due to the head-to-head tiebreaker.

There's a lot of football to be played, but the Patriots are creeping up the standings with a home game coming up in a stadium they are undefeated in this season. The rest of the AFC should be on notice.

MetroBet best bets for NFL Week 13

Where to place your money this weekend.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
letters@metro.us

Vikings receiver Stefon Diggs will be a handful for the New England secondary. GETTY IMAGES

Chicago Bears (-4.5) at New York Giants

Moneyline: Bears -170, Giants +140

Betting Total: 45 points

Not only did the Bears go into Detroit and beat the Lions on a short turnaround last week, they also won without Mitchell Trubisky. Chase Daniel compiled 226 of the 264 total yards Chicago gained in that tilt as Jordan Howard and Tarik Cohen were held in check. That was their fifth straight win and cover, and they should make it six on Sunday against the "dressed-up" Giants.

New York has enjoyed an easy schedule of late, beating the 49ers and Bucs (by a grand total of seven points) before losing a close one to the Eagles. This is a big step up in class for Eli Manning and company now. The Bears' defense, third in points per game allowed and second in yards per play allowed, should give the Giants' offense fits.

It's unclear as of Tuesday whether or not Trubisky will suit up, but last week's line movement suggests he's worth only about a point to the spread.

Prediction: Bears win, 30-17

The play: Bears -4.5

New York Jets at Tennessee Titans (-9.5)

Moneyline: Jets +370, Titans -465

Betting Total: 40.5 points

It's hard to believe the Jets were 3-3 at one point as they've lost five straight games, failing to cover the spread each time. Things don't get any easier for them as they travel to Tennessee to take on the Titans this Sunday.

The Jets' offense, expected to be led by Josh McCown once more, has become stagnant, mustering just 11.2 points per game over their last five contests. They'll face a Tennessee defense that is sixth in points per game allowed in 2018.

Marcus Mariota and company have struggled to produce points most of the year, but New York's defense has surrendered over 28 points per game during their five-game losing streak. The Titans' offensive line is the worst in the league by sacks allowed this year, but the Jets' pass rush is just 26th in sacks (22).

Venue will play a big role in determining the outcome based on recent trends. The Jets have failed to cover in five of their last six on the road, while the Titans are 6-1 against the spread in their last seven home games.

Prediction: Titans win, 24-10

The play: Titans -9.5

Minnesota Vikings at New England Patriots (-6)

Moneyline: Vikings +210, Patriots -260

Betting Total: 48.5 points

Kirk Cousins' mantle is far less crowded than Tom Brady's, but he should outshine the perennial MVP candidate this Sunday.

Minnesota's offense relies heavily on Cousins and his fifth-ranked passing offense. Fortunately for them, New England's secondary has obliged opposing quarterbacks all season long, as they're just 25th against the aerial attack. Perimeter weapons Stefon Diggs and Adam Thielen present a matchup nightmare for the Patriots.

The Vikings' defense has rebounded after a rough start to 2018, allowing fewer than 300 yards in five of their last six games. Amazingly, they've limited enemy quarterbacks to fewer than 200 yards in five straight contests. That spells trouble for New England, who will need to lean on Brady to have a shot at a victory if Sony Michel can't suit up or is at less than 100 percent.

Prediction: Vikings win, 34-31

The play: Vikings +6 and Vikings vs. Patriots Over 48.5 points
